Team Review – Second / Last Project of Sprint 1

During this project, we worked together as a team and gained valuable experience in collaboration and task management. However, we identified two main weaknesses. First, we struggled with time and energy management because we underestimated the time needed to complete certain tasks, which led us to spend more time than expected. Second, we were not familiar with Figma, which caused confusion and made it difficult for us to use the tool effectively. These challenges showed us the importance of improving our task estimation, planning, and technical skills. For our next projects, we aim to set more realistic deadlines, manage our workload better, and improve our knowledge of the tools we use to work more efficiently as a team.
